There is an increasing consensus for the efficacy of integrated, multidisciplinary biofeedback - not only heart rate variability biofeedback, but many strategies/parameters/methodologies - for treatment of different stress and lifestyle related disorders. We are also working for being able to provide a special US-certification program will also be presented

Program - Language: Depend on participants nationality (although no Chinese)

June - day one

12.30 Registration

13.00-13.20 Welcome and opening remarks. Professor Bo von Scheele, organizer

13.20-15.00 Presentation of IPBM by ?

15.30-24.00 About how to proceed out of interests of priorities and possibilities

June - day two

08.30-11.30 Summary from yesterday and continuation ...

11.30-19.00 Hands-on followed by panel discussions

Background to the meeting: The technical development makes it possible now to analyse psychophysiological reasons for medical and psychological problems/diseases. We can also better follow the effects of rehabilitation in individuals (individualizing strategies). This means we can go from symptoms as basic base for diagnosis to analysis of psychophysiological reasons for symptoms/problems/diseases and better understand how health is developed and maintained, as well as how interventions can be conducted, in terms of prevention or treatment. At present we can do this most effectively in the domains of stress related and lifestyle related diseases/problems such as e.g. cardiovascular, including hypertension, and different kinds of psychological ones.
